My Lord!
In England lately a nobleman who had been driving the Bath coach a few stages on a night journey took the head of the table when the passengers sat down to supper at Marlborough, and addressing a lady, an inside passenger, said: "Will you allow me to send you some of this beef?" No answer. "Permit me, madam, to help you to some beef?" No answer. "Once more," rather loudly, "shall I send you any beef?" Lady, with an air of intense indignation: "Man, I never speak to outside passengers!" Landlord enters and addresses the amateur coachman as "my lord!"
Tableau.

A French statistician estimates that within the last twenty years no fewer than 1,000 lives have been lost by the burning of theaters, and that the losses of property from that cause exceed $60,000,000.

Merchant's Gargling Oil.
This standard liniment has been before the people for over forty years, it having been first manufactured in 1833, and it is safe to assert that no preparation in the market has so fully stood the test of time, and been received with such universal favor as the Gargling Oil. It is found in nearly every household in this country, and is also sold extensively in Europe. From a very small beginning the Gargling Oil Company has been obliged to steadily increase its facilities for manufacturing, and now employs an army of men, and occupies magnificent buildings of its own. Much of the success of the company is due to the careful and efficient management of Mr. John Hodge, who for some time has held the responsible position of secretary, and who is also the proprietor of the Hodge Opera House, one of the finest buildings in Lockport, N. Y. The Gargling Oil is for sale at all the drug stores. — Quincy (Ill.) Whig.

Pimples on the face, rough skin, chapped hands, salubrious and all cutaneous affections cured, the skin made soft and smooth, by the use of J. P. Coats' Soap. This soap is made of the purest materials, and is the only kind that can be relied upon to remove all impurities, made from common tar, which are worthless. — Com.

A Large Family.
H. L. Powers, of the Grand Central Hotel, Broadway, New York, often provides for about 1,200 people—more than the entire population of many of the towns in this State. It is a beautiful sight to see them in the gorgeous dining hall, regaling on the choicest of the market affords. We were at a loss to account for so large a patronage these dull times. This was fully explained by the information that prices had been reduced to $2.50 and $3 per day.

A YOUTH'S PUBLICATION.—For half a century the YOUTH'S COMPANION, of Boston, has been published. It was started in 1827, and is today one of the brightest and most vigorous papers with which we are acquainted.

Have you a sore in the face? and is it badly swollen? Have you a severe pain in the breast, back or side? Have you cramps or pains in the stomach or bowels? Have you bilious colic or severe griping pains? If so, use Johnson's Anodyne Liniment Internally.

A few years since it was not considered the "best thing" to chew plug tobacco, but it is again coming into great favor, and gentlemen can be now seen daily with a plug of the genuine "Matchless" brand, and it is considered the choice morsel of the day. Every plug has the words "Matchless P. T. Co." printed thereon.

J. & P. Coats were awarded a medal and diploma at the Centennial Exposition, and commended for the "superior strength and excellent quality of their spool cotton."

Saves Your Hair.—If you wish to save your hair and keep it strong and healthy use Burnett's Ointment.

Centennial Awards.

(From the New York Tribune, November 18.)

The newspapers have been lately teeming with ingenious and original advertisements regarding the awards. These publications have been skillfully prepared, so as to convey the impression that this or that exhibitor has really received the highest and best award. Thus, instead of informing the public as to the true state of affairs, they have really deceived the reader. Visitors at the Centennial find themselves bewildered by the adverse claims to distinction which they find placed on every hand, and they do not know which way to turn to discover the truth. In no department has this system of misrepresentation been carried to so great an extent as that devoted to pianofortes. There has been a "war" between piano exhibitors since the Exhibition opened, and a regular skirmish line of pianos since the awards were officially announced. They have vied with each other in the use of extravagant language to prove their respective claims to distinction. The most ingenious methods have been devised; disinterested correspondents, whose sole object was to instruct the ignorant public, have volunteered their services for a contest of pianos. Judges of awards, in the interest of certain piano manufacturers, have made pretended revelations of the secrets of the jury-room, for the sake of supporting the claims of their particular favorite. Lightning calculators have been appealed to for a correct and consistent mathematical rules by which to establish absolutely the supremacy of their clients, on the pretense of the so much abused maxim that figures cannot lie. All these efforts, while ridiculous to those acquainted with the subject, have been attempted to induce the uninitiated. In fact, the piano men have let nothing undone to mislead the public, and by their efforts have caused everything relating to pianos to be looked upon with distrust, and have made themselves secure in the confidence of the public. By these means injustice is not only done to the public, but to those who are not only entitled to the leading position, but who were awarded it by the judges. Your correspondent has taken the trouble to submit all the various reports, and has endeavored to be an impartial reporter. He has never used the word "superior" in his reports, and since the official announcement, although they were decreed the highest honors in the piano department, they have modestly remained in the background. It is fortunate that the judges, in preparing the Knabe report, so far refrained from any doubt about their pre-eminence. They have not only commended all their four styles of pianos (concert grand, parlor grand, square and upright), and accorded them the praise of unequalled excellence in all the details of perfect instruments. The report is a masterpiece of simplicity and comprehensiveness, specifying all the elements of merit which it is possible for the best pianoforte to possess—power, richness and singing quality of tone; ease and elasticity of touch; effectiveness of action; solidity and originality of construction; and the skill and workmanship. By comparing it with other reports in the same department, even the most skeptical will acknowledge that no stronger language could have been used to express the unanimous approval of the judges. PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11, 1876.

Consumption.

FRANKFORD, N. Y., Nov. 1, 1868.
In the fall of 1847 I took a severe cold, which settled upon my lungs, where it remained for several months. I tried several kinds of medicine, and consulted several physicians, but received no benefit. The fall of 1848 found me completely prostrated—confined to my bed with the same severe cough, accompanied by severe pain in my side, profuse sweats and weakness. My family and friends, as well as myself, felt that I was near the end. At this crisis I sent for a bottle of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and, wonderful to relate, before I had used the first bottle my cough greatly subsided, my night sweats ceased, my appetite returned, and my pulse became regular. I slept soundly, and was soon able to be out and attend to business. I then consulted an able physician in relation to the course I had pursued and the medicine I had used. He advised me to continue the use of the Balsam, which I did, and found myself a well man; and now, at an age exceeding fifty years, enjoy as good health as ever before.

Whenever, during the last ten years, I have found an individual suffering from cough, I have always recommended the Balsam, and in numerous cases have sent it gratuitously to the suffering poor. In conclusion I would say, what I have said a great many times before, that the Balsam, with God's blessing, saved my life. HAZARD, CINCINNATI, O.

Butter and cheese are almost indispensable articles of food. Properly used, they are nutritious and healthy; but an inordinance of use either causes indigestion and dyspepsia. Parsons' Purgative Pills, judiciously used, will remove both of these troubles.

A curious custom still maintained at Bavarian executions is that of the clerk of the court breaking a black wand and throwing the fragments at the feet of the criminal. This is symbolical that his life is to be violently and suddenly terminated. It was done a few weeks since at Munich. The executions are not public.
